Dr. Sarah Hensley: Founder Voice, Story & Podcast Guide

Official Owner Agent Knowledge Reference — Bio, Credentials, Personal Journey, Philosophy, Team & Podcast

1. About Dr. Sarah Hensley (Founder & CEO)

Dr. Sarah Hensley, widely known as "The Love Doc" and "The Dating Decoder," is a social psychologist, researcher, educator, podcaster, and relationship coach with over 20 years of experience in human behavior research, education, and coaching. She is the Founder and CEO of The Love Doc Relationship Coaching Services (doctorsarahhensley.com), where her work helps individuals and couples move beyond awareness alone into real behavioral change and earned secure attachment.

Her evidence-based work has reached over 1.5 million social media followers and helped hundreds of thousands of people worldwide. Dr. Hensley has been featured in national media including CNN, The Washington Post, USA Today, The New York Times, and numerous digital platforms spotlighting attachment science and relationship transformation.

2. Academic Credentials & Clinical Background

- Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) in Psychology — Miami University (2004)
- Master of Science (M.S.) in Psychology — University of Kentucky (2007)
- Ph.D. in Experimental Psychology with concentrations in Social and Health Psychology — University of Kentucky (2010)

Before launching her full-time coaching practice, Dr. Hensley spent years teaching at the graduate level and directing a graduate training program in Clinical Psychology. Today she focuses on distilling decades of psychological literature into practical, actionable strategies people can apply immediately.

3. Personal Attachment Journey & Origin of Her Philosophy

Dr. Hensley's methodology was forged not only in academic research, but also in her own personal attachment crisis. Following significant life events—including the death of her ex-husband, her mother's cancer diagnosis, profound personal loss, relational trauma, and a painful breakup with an avoidant romantic partner—she learned firsthand that academic knowledge of attachment theory does not automatically produce healing.

Applying her scientific training, she poured herself into research on mindset work, emotional processing, and nervous system regulation. Through consistent practice of specific behavioral and regulation techniques, she built her own earned secure attachment—and later met and married her husband, Donald Hensley.

"The greatest misconception in transforming your relationship is that awareness creates change. Change only happens when you learn the proper tools, practice them consistently, and build the capacity to respond differently." — Dr. Sarah Hensley

4. Signature Methodology: The Hensley Change Model & Coaching vs. Therapy

Dr. Hensley is the creator of The Hensley Change Model for Relational Re-Conditioning™, an evidence-based framework combining attachment science, nervous system regulation, metacognition, and practical behavioral strategies to help clients build earned secure attachment and lasting relational change.

Her core coaching approach is Clear, Direct, and Behavior-Focused across three pillars:

- 01 Pattern Aware: Clearly naming the dynamics keeping clients stuck so they recognize their own patterns.
- 02 Insight Driven: Explaining why a pattern exists—not just what it is—creating leverage for change.
- 03 Action Oriented: Teaching repeatable, intentional tools, skills, and behaviors practiced consistently over time.

Why Coaching Differs from Traditional Talk Therapy: Rather than spending years simply dissecting past history, Dr. Hensley compares attachment coaching to a sports coach providing immediate, play-by-play winning strategies for the current game. Her action plans help both couples in crisis (even when therapy previously failed or divorce has been filed) and singles preparing for healthy, secure love.

5. The Dr. Sarah Hensley Show (The Love Doc Podcast)

The Dr. Sarah Hensley Show (also known as The Love Doc Podcast) is hosted by Dr. Sarah Hensley alongside co-host Raina Butcher (Vice President & Podcast Co-Host) and produced/managed by Josh Butcher (Podcast Producer & Manager). Within its first six months, the podcast surpassed a quarter of a million listeners.

Available on Apple Podcasts, Spotify, YouTube, and doctorsarahhensley.com/the-lov-doc-podcast/, each episode tackles listeners' pressing questions on love, attraction, attachment dynamics, modern romance, self-awareness, personal healing, upleveling one's life, faith, and growth perspectives.

6. Certified Coaching Team & Leadership

Every coach at The Love Doc Relationship Coaching Services is personally trained and mentored by Dr. Hensley in The Hensley Change Model for Relational Re-Conditioning™:

- Elizabeth Pomeroy, M.A.: Certified attachment coach with a master's degree in counseling from Asbury Theological Seminary. Guides individuals and couples through insecure attachment healing, breakups, high-conflict marriages, neuroscience-informed tools, and optional faith-based insights.
- Amy Tatiana: Certified attachment coach pursuing her Master's Degree in Clinical Mental Health Counseling at The College of New Jersey. Specializes in avoidant breakup recovery, relationship repair, subconscious reprogramming, and healthy relating.
- Leadership & Support Team: Raina Butcher (Vice President & Podcast Co-Host), Donald Hensley (Chief Financial Officer), Arianna Stone (Director of Marketing & Content), Ashley Logan (Director of Sales), Josh Butcher (Podcast Producer & Manager), and Reagan Leake (Executive Assistant & Customer Support Specialist).

7. Ways to Learn & Work Together

Dr. Hensley offers multiple pathways depending on the level of support someone wants: Self-Paced Courses for foundational study, Hybrid Group Coaching for live structured cohorts and community practice, Private 1:1 Individual and Couples Coaching for personalized guidance, plus Free Resources including the Free Webinar (Achieving Your Attachment Security). Visitors looking to compare specific program pricing or enrollment options can switch to Program Advisor mode at any time.